After the meeting of the G7 states in June 2014 in Brussels, Germany assumed the Presidency of the Group of Seven (G7) earlier than originally planned. Having hosted summits in 1978, 1985, 1992, 1999 and 2007, Germany will now host the next summit meeting on 7 and 8 June 2015 in Schloss Elmau.

Germany, France, the United Kingdom, Italy, Japan, the United States of America and Canada (since 1976) together make up the G7. The European Commission is also represented at all meetings.

The motto of this year's summit is "Think Ahead. Act Together"[?]. Key topics for the German G7 Presidency and G7 Summit in Schloss Elmau include the global economy, foreign, security and development policy, as well as empowering self-employed women and women in vocational training, energy security, and the upcoming UN conferences on international climate protection and the post-2015 agenda. These issues are all of global medium- to long-term importance. The Group of Seven are aware of their shared responsibility "" and conscious that they will only be able to find answers to the questions of the future if they closely coordinate their policies.

German Chancellor Angele Merkel invited the heads of state and government of the Group of Seven (G7) members to Schloss Elmau, south of Munich, where the leaders will discuss a broad range of global issues within the framework of this informal group. President Barack Obama will attend the Summit on behalf of the United States. Vladimir Putin is absent from the meeting of the leaders of the seven greatest powers, since the annexation of the Crimea by Russia.-----

WHAT IS THE G7 ?

The G7 is an informal group of advanced economies that meets annually in the country which holds the rotating presidency. It is not an international institution and has no permanent secretariat. The design of the G7 allows for candid discussions among leaders.

During the 1970s, the United States, France, the United Kingdom, Germany, Japan, and Italy formed the Group of Six (G6) as an informal grouping that would meet annually to discuss matters of political and economic significance. Canada was added in 1976 to form the G7.

Originally, the G7 focused exclusively on economic and trade issues but has expanded over time to include many aspects of common concern among the members. At previous Summits, G7 leaders have discussed global security, energy, the environment and climate change, and development issues.
